

Loving Correction

Hebrews 12:7-11

For the moment all discipline seems painful rather than pleasant, but later it yields the peaceful fruit of righteousness to those who have been trained by it. Hebrews 12:11

The peace of Christ be with you.

Have you ever heard your mother or father say: "When you have your children you will understand". I imagine it's a phrase that many of us hear, especially when it came to discipline.

From our position as children, from our partial vision it was difficult for us to understand the decisions that our fathers took for our good. But over time, we came to understand the love that was behind each of their actions.

We were made children of God on the day of our Baptism, from that moment on he made a covenant with us, he promised to take care of us, guide us, teach us, defend us, love us. Although our infidelity and that we often flee like a prodigal son from his side, he looks for us and fight for us. Our suffering is, in some cases, used by God to discipline us. To correct us to keep us in His will. And that will, is none other than one day you can live with him eternally. Like a parent who loves you, He uses that brokenness to attend more important and eternal matters: your life and salvation.

Remember, Christ suffered eternal pain on the cross, the abandonment of his own Father, so that your sadness in this life, be changed by eternal joy there in heaven.

Pastor Alejandro

Dear Father, help us to recognize your will and live according to it. Amen.
